I am stunned, shocked, upset, aghast and fuming. Just had Inspector Wilson from @Humberbeat call me re my complaint.

Me: Did I commit a crime?

Him: No. But you have upset a lot of people in the trans community.

Me: I do not believe Trans women are women. How do I state that without it causing upset?

Him: Why would you tweet that? Why do you feel the need?

Me: Because I am taking part in a national conversation.

Him: But why do you feel the need to do that?

Me: Because I am a citizen and believe political engagement is necessary. Why are you asking me this?

Him: Because I don't see why you feel the need to say this.

Me: I can't believe you, a police inspector, are questioning my involvement in politics. What right have you to do that?

Him: You do have the right. I'm just asking why you feel the need to engage in hate.

Me: Hate? Where's the fucking hate?

Him: Maybe it's the wrong wording.

Me: you are a fucking Inspector. You do not get to tell me that expressing a legally held view is hate. And you don't get to pressure me to stop debating politically.

Him: If you swear, I will end this conversation.

Me. Ok. But I'm angry that you are ringing me and asking me why I'd want to be involved in politics.

Him: You have every right to be involved in politics. But why would you tweet your views when it upsets the trans community?

Me: let me get this straight. I said I do not believe trans women are women, and you ask me why I feel the need to tweet that. Right?

Him: Right. Exactly.

Me: I am ending this conversation now.

*Hangs up*

I am devastated.

@englishchick - help! I feel like I am going insane. This literally just happened.
